* JAREL BET CREEK OF TO Of this edition of JENNY, written by Dante Cabriel Rossetti, six hundred copies were made on handmade paper, and of them this is number 226

AZY laughing languid Jenny,

Fond of a kiss and fond of a guinea,

Whose head upon my knee to-night

Rests for a while, as if grown light
With all our dances and the sound
To which the wild tunes spun you round:
Fair Jenny mine, the thoughtless queen

Of kisses which the blush between

Could hardly make much daintier;

Whose eyes are as blue skies, whose hair

Is countless gold incomparable:

Fresh flower, scarce touched with signs that tell

Of Love's exuberant hotbed:—Nay,

Poor flower left torn since yesterday

Until to-morrow leave you bare;
Poor handful of bright spring-water
Flung in the whirlpool's shrieking face;
Poor shameful Jenny, full of grace
Thus with your head upon my knee;—
Whose person or whose purse may be
The lodestar of your reverie?

HIS room of yours, my Jenny, looks A change from mine so full of books. Whose serried ranks hold fast, forsooth, So many captive hours of youth,— The hours they thieve from day and night To make one's cherished work come right, And leave it wrong for all their theft, Even as to-night my work was left:

Until I vowed that since my brain
And eyes of dancing seemed so fain,
My feet should have some dancing too:
And thus it was I met with you.
Well, I suppose 't was hard to part,
For here I am. And now, sweetheart,
You seem too tired to get to bed.

T was a careless life I led

When rooms like this were scarce so

strange

Not long ago. What breeds the change,— The many aims or the few years? Because to-night it all appears Something I do not know again.

HE cloud's not danced out of my brain,—
The cloud that made it turn and swim

While hour by hour the books grew dim. Why. Ienny, as I watch you there,-For all your wealth of loosened hair, Your silk ungirdled and unlac'd And warm sweets open to the waist, All golden in the lamplight's gleam,— You know not what a book you seem. Half-read by lightning in a dream! How should you know, my Jenny? Nav. And I should be ashamed to say:-Poor beauty, so well worth a kiss! But while my thought runs on like this With wasteful whims more than enough,

I wonder what you're thinking of.

F of myself you think at all,

What is the thought?—conjectural On sorry matters best unsolved?—
Or inly is each grace revolved
To fit me with a lure?—or, sad
To think! perhaps you're merely glad
That I'm not drunk or ruffianly
And let you rest upon my knee.

OR sometimes, were the truth confess'd,

You're thankful for a little rest.—
Glad from the crush to rest within,
From the heart-sickness and the din
Where envy's voice at virtue's pitch
Mocks you because your gown is rich;

And from the pale girl's dumb rebuke. Whose ill-clad grace and toil-worn look Proclaim the strength that keeps her weak And other nights than yours bespeak; And from the wise unchildish elf. To schoolmate lesser than himself. Pointing you out, what thing you are:-Yes, from the daily jeer and jar, From shame and shame's outbraving too, Is rest not sometimes sweet to you?— But most from the hatefulness of man Who spares not to end what he began, Whose acts are ill and his speech ill, Who, having used you at his will, Thrusts you aside, as when I dine

I serve the dishes and the wine.

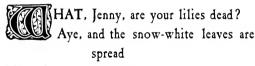

And do not let me think of you,
Lest shame of yours suffice for two.
What, still so tired? Well, well then, keep
Your head there, so you do not sleep;
But that the weariness may pass
And leave you merry, take this glass.
Ah! lazy lily hand, more bless'd
If ne'er in rings it had been dress'd

EHOLD the lilies of the field, They toil not, neither do they spin;

So doth the ancient text begin,— Not of such rest as one of these

Nor ever by a glove conceal'd.

Can share. Another rest and ease
Along each summer-sated path
From its new lord the garden hath,
Than that whose spring in blessings ran
Which praised the bounteous husbandman,
Ere yet, in days of hankering breath,
The lilies sickened unto death.

Like winter on the garden-bed.

But you had roses left in May,—

They were not gone too. Jenny, nay,

But must your roses die, and those

Their purfled buds that should unclose?

Even so; the leaves are curled apart, Still red as from the broken heart, And here's the naked stem of thorns.

AY, nay, mere words. Here nothing warns

As yet of winter. Sickness here
Or want alone could waken fear,—
Nothing but passion wrings a tear.
Except when there may rise unsought
Haply at times, a passing thought
Of the old days, which seem to be
Much older than any history
That is written in any book;
When she would lie in fields and look
Along the ground through the blown grass,

And wonder where the city was, Far out of sight, whose broil and bale They told her then for a child's tale.

MENNY, you know the city now. A child can tell the tale there. how Some things which are not yet enroll'd In market-lists are bought and sold Even till the early Sunday light. When Saturday night is market-night Everywhere, be it dry or wet, And market-night in the Haymarket. Our learned London children know. Poor Jenny, all your pride and woe; Have seen your lifted silken skirt Advertise dainties through the dirt;

Have seen your coach-wheels splash rebuke
On virtue; and have learned your look
When, wealth and health slipped past, you stare
Along the streets alone, and there,
Round the long park, across the bridge,
The cold lamps at the pavement's edge
Wind on together and apart,
A fiery serpent for your heart.

What if to her all this were said? Why, as a volume seldom read Being opened halfway shuts again, So might the pages of her brain Be parted at such words, and thence Close back upon the dusty sense.
For is there hue or shape defin'd
In Jenny's desecrated mind,
Where all contagious currents meet,
A Lethe of the middle street?
Nay, it reflects not any face,
Nor sound is in its sluggish pace,
But as they coil those eddies clot,
And night and day remember not.

HY, Jenny, you're asleep at last!—
Asleep, poor Jenny, hard and fast,—

So young and soft and tired; so fair, With chin thus nestled in your hair, Mouth quiet, eyelids almost blue As if some sky of dreams shone through!

Of doubt and horror,—what to say Or think,—this awful secret sway,

The potter's power over the clay! Of the same lump, it has been said,

For honor and dishonor made.

Two sister vessels. Here is one.

Y cousin Nell is fond of fun, And fond of dress, and change, and praise,

So mere a woman in her ways: And if her sweet eyes rich in youth Are like her lips that tell the truth, My cousin Nell is fond of love. And she's the girl I'm proudest of. Who does not prize her, guard her well? The love of change, in cousin Nell. Shall find the best and hold it dear: The unconquered mirth turn quieter Not through her own, through others' woe: The conscious pride of beauty glow Beside another's pride in her. One little part of all they share. For Love himself shall ripen these In a kind soil to just increase Through years of fertilizing peace.

Two sister vessels. Here is one.

T makes a goblin of the sun.

O pure,—so fall'n! How dare to think

Of the first common kindred link?

Yet, Jenny, till the world shall burn

It seems that all things take their turn

And who shall say but this fair tree

May need, in changes that may be,

Your children's children's charity?

Scorned then, no doubt, as you are scorn'd!

Shall no man hold his pride forewarn'd Till in the end, the Day of Days, At Judgment, one of his own race, As frail and lost as you, shall rise,—His daughter, with his mother's eyes?

Might not the dial scorn itself
That has such hours to register?
Yet as to me, even so to her
Are golden sun and silver moon,
In daily largesse of earth's boon,
Counted for life-coins to one tune.
And if, as blindfold fates are toss'd,
Through some one man this life be lost,
Shall soul not somehow pay for soul?

AIR shines the gilded aureole In which our highest painters place Some living woman's simple face. And the stilled features thus descried As Jenny's long throat droops aside,— The shadows where the cheeks are thin. And pure wide curve from ear to chin,-With Raffael's, Leonardo's hand To show them to men's souls, might stand Whole ages long, the whole world through, For preachings of what God can do. What has man done here? How atone. Great God, for this which man has done? And for the body and soul which by Man's pitiless doom must now comply With lifelong hell, what lullaby Of sweet forgetful second birth Remains? All dark. No sign on earth What measure of God's rest endows The many mansions of His house.

IKE a rose shut in a book
In which pure women may not look,
For its base pages claim control
To crush the flower within the soul;
Where through each dead rose-leaf that clings,
Pale as transparent Psyche-wings,
To the vile text, are traced such things

As might make lady's cheek indeed More than a living rose to read; So nought save foolish foulness may Watch with hard eyes the sure decay; And so the life-blood of this rose. Puddled with shameful knowledge, flows Through leaves no chaste hand may unclose; Yet still it keeps such faded show Of when 'twas gathered long ago, That the crushed petals' lovely grain, The sweetness of the sanguine stain, Seen of a woman's eyes, must make Her pitiful heart, so prone to ache, Love roses better for its sake:-Only that this can never be:-

Even so unto her sex is she.

A cipher of man's changeless sum
Of lust, past, present, and to come,
Is left. A riddle that one shrinks
To challenge from the scornful sphinx.

Be flung—sits there, deaf, blind, alone;—Aye, and shall not be driven out
Till that which shuts him round about
Break at the very Master's stroke,
And the dust thereof vanish as smoke,
And the seed of Man vanish as dust:—
Even so within this world is Lust.

OME, come, what use in thoughts like this?

Poor little Jenny, good to kiss,—
You'd not believe by what strange roads
Thought travels, when your beauty goads
A man to-night to think of toads!
Jenny, wake up. . . . Why, there's the dawn!

ND there's an early wagon drawn To market, and some sheep that jog

Bleating before a barking dog; And the old streets come peering through Another night that London knew: And all as ghostlike as the lamps.

O on the wings of day decamps My last night's frolic. Glooms begin

To shiver off as lights creep in Past the gauze curtains half drawn-to. And the lamp's doubled shade grows blue,— Your lamp, my Jenny, kept alight, Like a wise virgin's, all one night! And in the alcove cooly spread Glimmers with dawn your empty bed;

And yonder your fair face I see
Reflected lying on my knee.
Where teems with first foreshadowings
Your pier-glass scrawled with diamond rings:
And on your bosom all night worn
Yesterday's rose now droops forlorn
But dies not yet this summer morn.

ND now without, as if some word

Had called upon them that they heard,

The London sparrows far and nigh Clamor together suddenly; And Jenny's cage-bird grown awake Here in their song his part must take,

Because here too the day doth break.

Strikes grayly on her. Let her sleep.
But will it wake her if I heap
These cushions thus beneath her head
Where my knee was? No,—there's your bed,
My Jenny, while you dream. And there
I lay among your golden hair
Perhaps the subject of your dreams,
These golden coins.

For still one deems

That Jenny's flattering sleep confers
New magic on the magic purse.—
Grim web, how clogged with shrivelled flies!
Between the threads fine fumes arise
And shape the pictures in the brain.

There roll no streets in glare and rain, Nor flagrant man-swine whets his tusk: But delicately sighs in musk The homage of the dim boudoir; Or like a palpitating star Thrilled into song, the opera-night Breathes faint in the quick pulse of light; Or at the carriage-window shine Rich wares for choice; or, free to dine, Whirls through its hour of health, divine For her, the concourse of the Park. And though in the discounted dark Her functions there and here are one. Beneath the lamps and in the sun There reigns at least the acknowledged belle Apparelled beyond parallel. Ah, Jenny, yes, we know your dreams.

When silver-shrined in shadowy grove: Aye, or let offerings nicely placed But hide Priapus to the waist, And whoso looks on him shall see An eligible deity.

HY, Jenny, waking here alone
May help you to remember one,
Through all the memory's long outworn
Of may a double-pillowed morn.
I think I see you when you wake,
And rub your eyes for me, and shake
My gold, in rising, from your hair,
A Danæ for a moment there.

That tinkling makes him audible.

ND must I mock you to the last,

Ashamed of my own shame,—aghast

Because some thoughts not born amiss
Rose at a poor fair face like this?
Well, of such thoughts so much I know:
In my life, as in hers, they show,
By a far gleam which I may near,
A dark path I can strive to clear.
